Thank you for registering for the 2017 Energy Summit cohosted by the HMSDC and US Department of Energy.

We recognize the magnitude of the disaster caused by Hurricane Harvey. We are in the process of gathering information to determine if the Energy Summit will move forward as planned next week. We are waiting to hear back from City officials and the Convention Center management team regarding the use of the George R. Brown Convention Center. The City of Houston has designated the George R. Brown Convention Center as a shelter for those affected by this catastrophic storm. We stand behind Mayor Turner and all city officials in opening the convention center doors for those in need of assistance.

We understand that the airports are closed and many neighborhoods are flooded preventing many residents from leaving their homes. We want to ensure that everyone participating in the Energy Summit can safely travel to and navigate the use of the City's airports and roadways. The well-being and safety of presenters and attendees as well as HMSDC employees and volunteers is our utmost priority. The next Energy Summit update will be sent and published on our website and through our social media platforms by noon on Wednesday August 30, 2017.
